

In the past year, I started reading a few different versions of the Bhagavad Gita. But I realised that for what in my opinion the Gita is supposed to be, a writing which people can take inspiration from and implement what they learned from it in their daily life, a lot of explanations and commentaries of the Gita aren't really easy to understand. And so I have taken it upon myself to write a commentary of the Bhagavad Gita which not only explains the story and background as well as possible, but also emphasizes on its teachings, connecting Arjun's dilemma and what Lord Krishna taught him to our own daily lives.
